Eldercare costs are growing. However, many employers have yet to respond to this growing issue and better support employees caring for loved ones with age-related chronic conditions. The good news is that some have and, as importantly, many more companies are realizing that they should respond. The question these employers have is “how”?

Join the Women’s Bureau, ReACT (Respect a Caregiver’s Time), Gray Panthers, and representatives from select companies as they address the following questions, using examples from ReACT’s recent Promising Practices in Workplace Eldercare report, which harnesses insights from its forty-plus members from Fortune 100 Companies, universities, and non-profit organizations:

- What do employee caregivers need to support their personal and professional demands?
- What are examples of promising practices being used by corporations today?
- What is the return on investment on eldercare benefits?

Who should attend?
HR professionals and advocates interested in learning promising practices for supporting employees with eldercare responsibilities. Employers who would like to learn how to respond to the rising rates of eldercare and the increasing impact on companies’ bottom line.

SPEAKERS INCLUDE:

Grace Protos
Regional Administrator, New York
US Department of Labor, Women’s Bureau

Drew Holzapfel
Convener
ReACT

Jack Kupferman
President
Gray Panthers NYC Network

For questions, call (646) 264-3789
or email
trachtenberg.mallory@dol.gov

For more information on the Women’s Bureau and other programs or events in your region, please visit us at www.dol.gov/wb

Interested in more events from the Women’s Bureau? Let us know your ideas! Email: trachtenberg.mallory@dol.gov